What's new:

by Projekt 1st SKU: KG7Y-HO-EMS Brief Overview: The BR Class 45 'Peak' Locomotive is a loco to be run over the Swedish Alltrack network, which was first imported as a single unit in 1967. Although very up to date, its short life expectancy meant that it remained useful and out of storage until the importation of larger and more powerful locos in the 1990s. Compatible with: BR Class 45 'Peak' Locomotive The first few years (1967-1969)The Loco is imported as a single unit, and is repainted later into BR Red livery in May 1969. 1969 First Major Changes The loco survives much longer than expected, although it is repainted into BR Blue livery in 1971. Its last run was in October 1969. 1967-1969 Second Major Changes 1969-1971 The Loco Is Repainted The loco is repainted in Orange with a stainless steel bonnet and with the new ZF articulated loco bogies fitted. The loco wears the same ident going into public service on the Alltäckbanan, Warttbytbanan and the Stockholm Olaröbanan. 1987 and 1988 the loco is removed from public service. 1978 Dieselisation The loco is fitted with a 550hp prime mover (a 1400mm long V12 from a Fiat engine). The loco is used as a special cross country loco, and due to its comparatively short period of useful life, it is considered better to reuse a car rather than take one out of work. 1985 Supply Of New Locos The locos are replaced at regular intervals and restored using parts from the spare loco. 1986 Replace The Operated Locos A new Loco is imported from Germany. The new loco has a longer period of useful life than the loco had, yet the loco is more effective in terms of carrying more passengers and freight. The loco is branded and released in BR Red livery, and run its first ever journey in AMB Stockholm Zoo. 1997 The loco is repainted to Stockholm Transport Museum heritage livery, until the end of its operation. 2001 Dieselisation II

To Battle! Hell's Crusade is an epic Medieval Strategy Game set in an award winning single-player campaign, and a challenging, multiplayer, city-building mode. Set in an alternate timeline, the game follows the adventures of Jacobus, a man held captive by evil hordes of demons and succubi. So you better start your turn fast, because there's a whole lot of stiff competition and no room for messing up. -In the single-player adventure, you must play as Jacobus, a blacksmith captured by evil hordes and turned into an apothecary. Together with you faithful soldier, you will set out on a campaign to reclaim the kingdoms that belong to the Church and to make it back to the light. -In the multi-player version you will take on other players as Jacobus, forging his way through challenging battles, upgrade your character and bring the fight to your enemies. -The game starts with a tutorial, which will teach you the basics and allow you to get a feel for the gameplay. Steam: Game Website: Facebook: Twitter: Here's a JPG image to show how it looks like when you launch the game, start playing and are in the forest. You can click the image to see the full resolution. The game is in development and we're putting up free updates on the beta stage. We're in the process of finishing the game and then hopefully, we'll be sending it off to Nintendo for their approval and, of course, launching it on the App Store. I've just started trying to make money from the game, but I'm currently having issues with AdMob, and that's why I'm afraid to make any announcements of it right now. The app works properly, it has all its buttons and options, I'm just not sure if it'll run properly on iPad devices. There's also a problem with the various Samsung devices it was tested on, which it just crashes after initialization with an error code of "0xC010...". Till I'm back on track with the AdMob problem, I'll leave you with this video! This is the game that started it all off. It's
