How can I call the method with xhr.send(params)? Following the example: What I have tried: var params = { firstname: "John", lastname: "Doe" }; xhr.send(params); Can I use simply (note: "params" is a var parameter): xhr.send(params); I am using jquery. Please, help me. Thanks for your time and your help. A: If you're using an Ajax call with jquery, the object you send to xhr.send(params) is generally called a "jQuery.param()" object. You can see this if you've printed out params to the console: console.log(params); It works like this: xhr.send(jQuery.param(params)); You can check the docs here. Your question has been clarified a bit since my answer

A: You can use Icon Necro to convert the icon bitmap into an image and then add the image to the GUI. The icon could be a bitmap or a png and you can add it the GUI as an image. icon = necro.Icon("icon.png"); gui.Icon = icon; Tuesday, July 27, 2006 The Internet is an infestation The Internet is an infestation. It will spread far and wide. Here's what you need to know about the current war, beginning with NBC Nightly News anchor Brian Williams' presentation of the "I" statement by Tom DeLay, the lobbyist and former GOP House leader who yesterday testified under oath that he had never been involved in illegal activity in connection with his political activities. The statement sounded good. It sounded good until I found this: "In the past I may have made some trips in my personal plane to meet with people," DeLay said. "I had a private plane that was equipped to take care of myself, my friends, my family." Apparently, "i" planes are a well-known feature of Washington's aviation infrastructure. And, if the "i" here is a verb, then it refers to a criminal offense. But for DeLay, the "i" in this case stands for "infestation." That's what he meant by the word "me." To follow this story from this morning, turn to the main page on the USA Today website at usatoday.com, then follow the link "DeLay, Brothers Out of Focus." The story runs a total of seven stories, starting on the front page, and starting with Brian Williams, who introduces the story (under the headline, "DElay to testify under oath, perjure himself, panel to weigh options") with this statement: "An extraordinary journey unfolds here today as former House Majority Leader Tom DeLay takes the stand before a grand jury to answer questions about a case involving organized crime figures." And Williams continues: "If DeLay doesn't take the witness stand, the grand jury will be told by District Attorney Ronnie Earle they have the power to issue a subpoena." Williams 6d1f23a050
